Session Learning Outcomes

By the end of this session, the student should be able to:

- Explain self-exploration as the dialogue between what I am and what I really want to be.
- State what natural acceptance is and list its characteristics.
- Describe the content and process of self-exploration.

How to Engage with this Session (The Process)

- Whatever is said is a proposal — do not assume it to be true or false.
- Verify it on your own right, on the basis of your natural acceptance.
- It is a dialogue: first with the teacher, then within your own self — between what you are and what you really want to be.

Part A — Key Ideas (Recap)

- Self-exploration is a process of dialogue — first with the teacher, then within one's own self.
- The inner dialogue is between what I am (desire, thought, expectation) and what I really want to be (natural acceptance).
- When these are in harmony → happiness; when in contradiction → unhappiness.
- Natural acceptance is innate, invariant, uncorrupted by pre-conditioning, definite and universal.
- Content of self-exploration = happiness, prosperity and their continuity; process = proposal, verify on natural acceptance, experiential validation.

Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1 — The Dialogue Within

Pick one desire/expectation you have. Compare it with what you really want to be (your natural acceptance), and note whether they are in harmony or contradiction.

What I am (a desire / expectation)	What I really want to be (natural acceptance)	In harmony or contradiction? → happiness/unhappiness
Wanting to get angry when criticized by others	Wanting to remain calm, peaceful, and respectful to others	Contradiction → Unhappiness
Wanting to hoard wealth and material objects endlessly	Wanting to feel prosperous and share with others	Contradiction → Unhappiness

Activity 2 — Natural Acceptance vs Liking

For each example, write what you LIKE and the deeper thing you NATURALLY ACCEPT.

Example	I like…	I naturally accept…
Waking early or late	Sleeping late out of comfort or laziness	Waking early to maintain health and body rhythm
Playing with toys / travelling the world	Travelling the world for temporary excitement	Living in continuous harmony and deep exploration
Food from a particular restaurant	Tasty, junk, or fast food from a restaurant	Nutritious food that nurtures the body

Activity 3 — Content of Self-exploration

Answer for yourself (Yes / No):

- Do I desire happiness? Yes
- Do I desire prosperity? Yes
- Do I desire the continuity of both? Yes
- If the continuity of happiness and prosperity were ensured, what else would I desire? Nothing else; the continuous experience of happiness and prosperity covers the complete fulfilment of human desire.

Activity 4 — Which Process is Naturally Acceptable to You?

Tick one and say why:

- Self-exploration / self-verification on your own right, leading to understanding in yourself, OR
- Choice: Self-exploration / self-verification on your own right, leading to understanding in yourself
- A process of do's and don'ts, assuming what is said without verification.

- Reason: Self-exploration enables self-organization, freedom, and inner alignment. A process of rigid "do's and don'ts" or blind assumptions creates external dependence, enslavement, and inner contradiction.

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Q1. Explain self-exploration as “the dialogue within.” Between which two things does it take place, and what is the outcome when they are in harmony and when in contradiction?

Self-exploration is an internal process of self-observation and verification. It takes place as a dialogue between two aspects of the self:

- What I am: Current state of desires, thoughts, expectations, and pre-conditioned habits.
- What I really want to be: Innate natural acceptance.
- Outcome when in harmony: When desires, thoughts, and behaviors align with natural acceptance, the self experiences inner peace, continuous happiness, and balance.
- Outcome when in contradiction: When desires contradict natural acceptance, it leads to inner conflict, stress, dissatisfaction, and unhappiness.

Q2. What is natural acceptance? List its characteristics.

Natural acceptance is the innate capacity within every human being to directly perceive what is naturally acceptable, harmonious, and fulfilling.

- Characteristics of Natural Acceptance:
    - Innate: Present within every individual from birth.
    - Invariant: Remains constant across time and situations.
    - Uncorrupted by pre-conditioning: Unaltered by external beliefs, social conditioning, or sensory inputs.
    - Universal: Identical for all human beings across cultures, regions, and ages.
    - Definite: Provides unambiguous clarity regarding values, relationships, and existence.

Q3. Describe the content and the process of self-exploration.

Content of Self-exploration:

1. The desire for continuous happiness and prosperity.
2. The program to achieve this continuous happiness and prosperity by understanding and living in harmony at all levels of existence (Self, Family, Society, Nature/Existence).

Process of Self-exploration:

1. Treat every idea or instruction as a proposal.
2. Do not accept or reject it based on external authority or pre-conditioning.
3. Verify the proposal on the basis of your Natural Acceptance.
4. Live according to it for experiential validation in behavior (leading to mutual happiness) and work (leading to mutual prosperity).
