Session Learning Outcomes

By the end of this session, you should be able to:

- Identify the activities of the Self — desire (imaging), thought (analysing-comparing) and expectation (selecting-tasting) — together called imagination.
- Explain the three sources of motivation for imagination — preconditioning, sensation and natural acceptance — and their implications (enslavement vs self-organisation).
- Explain that harmony in the Self is imagination in line with natural acceptance, and contradiction is imagination not in line with it.
- Distinguish desire from expectation, and intention (natural acceptance, “what I really want to be”) from competence (“what I am”).

How to Engage with this Worksheet

- Whatever is stated here (and in the lecture) is a proposal — do not assume it to be true or false.
- Verify it on your own right, on the basis of your natural acceptance, and validate it in your living.
- Treat each question as a dialogue: first between you and the material, and then within your own Self — between what you are and what you really want to be.

Part A — Key Ideas (Recap)

- The activities of the Self together form imagination: desire (imaging the content, ‘what I want to be’), thought (analysing-comparing, how to fulfil it) and expectation (selecting-tasting). Behaviour and work are expressions of imagination.
- Imagination is motivated from three sources. (1) Preconditioning — assuming without knowing; not definite, changes with time/place/individual; leads to enslavement. (2) Sensation — information through the sense organs (sound, touch, sight, taste, smell) from outside; not definite; enslavement; trying to derive happiness from sensation runs from tasty-necessary → tasty-unnecessary → tasteless-unnecessary → intolerable. (3) Natural acceptance — ‘what I really want to be’, my intention; definite, continuous, universal; self-organisation; leads to harmony and happiness within. We have a natural acceptance for relationship, harmony and co-existence.
- When imagination is fully in line with natural acceptance, the Self is in harmony (a happy, developed, self-organised Self — swatantrata — with definite, human conduct). When it is motivated by preconditioning or sensation, the Self may be in harmony or in contradiction; this is enslavement (partantrata) and the conduct is indefinite.

- Intention = natural acceptance, ‘what I really want to be’ (intended state). Competence = ‘what I am’ (current state).

Part B — In-Class Activity

Activity 1 — Preconditioning, Sensation or Natural Acceptance?

For each item, mark P (Preconditioning), S (Sensation) or NA (Natural Acceptance).

Item	P / S / NA
Respect elders	Preconditioning
To win	Preconditioning
Want to make the other happy	Natural Acceptance
Healthy body	Natural Acceptance
To be special, unique	Preconditioning
To come first in the class	Preconditioning
Feeling of collaboration	Natural Acceptance
To get a good name	Preconditioning
Survival of the fittest	Preconditioning
I want that bike because I like its colour and shape	Sensation
To understand everything	Natural Acceptance
Feeling of competition	Preconditioning

Activity 2 — Desire or Expectation?

Mark each item as D (Desire) or E (Expectation), as per the deck.

Item	D / E
Want to be the owner of a big house	D
Want others to like me, pay attention to me	E
Name, fame	D
Self-organisation (swatantrata)	D
Degree	E
Right understanding (knowledge)	D
Job	E
World tour	D

Activity 3 — Observe your imagination (5 minutes)

Observe your imagination for at least 5 minutes; once every minute, write down the object of your imagination. Then answer below.

- Were you aware of your imagination all of the time, or only some of the time?
- Were the imaginations well connected, or were there sudden jumps / gaps? What is the reason?
- For each imagination, what was the motivation — preconditioning, sensation or natural acceptance?

Awareness: Awareness occurs only some of the time due to unexamined mental habits.

Connection / Jumps: Imaginations often show sudden jumps because thoughts are driven by mixed, unverified external inputs rather than a single self-verified motivation.

Motivation: Motivations fluctuate between preconditioning, sensation, and occasionally natural acceptance.

Part C — Long-Answer Questions

Answer in your own words, verifying each point on the basis of your natural acceptance.

Q1. What are the activities of the Self? Explain imagination as desire, thought and expectation, and how behaviour and work relate to it. [5]

The activities of the Self are desire (imaging content), thought (analyzing-comparing), and expectation (selecting-tasting), collectively known as imagination. Behavior (towards humans) and work (with nature) are outward expressions driven by this internal imagination.

Q2. Explain the three sources of motivation for our imagination — preconditioning, sensation and natural acceptance — bringing out which lead to enslavement and which to self-organisation. [5]

The three sources are preconditioning (assumptions without knowing), sensation (sensory inputs), and natural acceptance (intrinsic inner values). Preconditioning and sensation lead to enslavement (partantrata) because they rely on external factors, whereas natural acceptance leads to self-organization (swatantrata).

Q3. When is the Self in harmony and when in contradiction? Relate this to natural acceptance, intention and competence. [5]

The Self is in harmony when imagination aligns with natural acceptance. It is in contradiction when imagination is driven by preconditioning or sensory desires that conflict with natural acceptance. Intention reflects natural acceptance ("what I really want to be"), while competence reflects current state capability ("what I am").

Q4. Distinguish between desire and expectation, with one example of each. [5]

Desire represents the inner image or goal (e.g., wanting to be a knowledgeable person), whereas expectation is the specific outward selection or interaction aimed at fulfilling that desire (e.g., expecting a high score on an exam).

Q5. Carry out the practice of observing your imagination for 5 minutes. Note whether you were aware of it all the time or only some of the time, and the motivation behind each imagination. [5]

Observing imagination reveals periodic gaps in awareness where attention drifts. Thoughts frequently jump between preconditioned targets (seeking status) and sensory inputs (craving food), showing that imagination is not always guided by natural acceptance.
